MICHIGAN SIGN COMPANY LANDS TWO INTERNATIONAL HOSPITAL CONTRACTS

HOLLAND, Mich. (Feb. 4, 2010)—Local business people Tim Weber and Leslie Louisell co-owners of Signs Now Holland located at 832 Productions Place, were recently awarded signage contracts for two hospitals in the Turks & Caicos Islands (TCI).

The new hospitals (Grand Turk Hospital on Grand Turk and Myrtle Rigby Hospital in Providenciales) are both new facilities in need of full wayfinding systems – one of the most important aspects of an efficient healthcare center. Signs Now is working in conjunction with island-based Pelican Design on the project. The job will be completed and shipped within seven days, and will result in the production of over 600 different signs.

“We have found that our expertise in wayfinding for hospitals and healthcare facilities is gaining some serious ground across the country, and even on an international level,” remarked Louisell. “The basics of wayfinding apply universally anywhere you are, and we are thrilled to be working with Pelican Design and the new facilities in the Turk & Caicos Islands”

Signs Now Holland has over 20 years experience in consulting, designing and implementing wayfinding systems for various organizations and industries. The company is knowledgeable in ADA requirements and specific regulations for the healthcare, manufacturing and hospitality industries. The company has several hospital & church projects throughout the region, including Borgess Health System in Kalamazoo, Sparrow Health System in Lansing and St. Mary's Mageden in Detroit.

In addition to ADA signage and interior wayfinding, Signs Now Holland offers multiple solutions for indoor and outdoor signage, including exhibit and trade show graphics, dimensional letters, logos, display banners and other visual communications tools.
